Corey,

The assets and the shells are still in place. Nothing has been liquidated. If it is your desire to fund the business then Mark Wood can either rehire the old employees or hire new employees. I have not committed fraud and have no desire to defraud NIR. Let Mark Wood know what you want to do.

You were told in writing several times funding was coming. Ira miller was told 15 times.

As I previously said, I have no control over these businesses. Mark worked these deals diligently until funding never arrived.

Mr schafflein-

Neither you nor Mr Wood made this apparent. Mr Bronson has a checkered past and now his reputation preceeds him.

No problem. Turn over all control immediately to the investors.

If not we will be forced to take legal action.

You were told distinctly that glbt could not be funded. But that the others would be.
Mr. Wood told us via email several times that the business was continuing and doing well.
Maybe you should have told him he wasn't working anymore?

Guys,

I read this chain of emails today. A few points of clarification. I am not an officer or director of either of the spin offs and have no authority to do any corporate action. All of my corporate actions were related to GLBT.

Mark Wood is the COO of the two spin offs. The information Ed (who is CEO of both) represented is correct as related to Texas law. After numerous email request for funding which was never received at either of the two spin offs, those employees were all let go as no monies ever arrived to pay them.

When the deal initially closed, it was clearly represented that funding would carry the companies to year end and possibly early January. They were early stage development businesses. Mark Wood was able to carry them to the end of January when funding completely dried up.

The equipment used by Virtual Call Center is in storage in Mark Woods garage.

These two spin offs are now shells.

I'll be happy to forward the previously sent emails if needed.

Yours,

Marl
